Fiscal Year 2011 Annual Report

REAL PEOPLE. REAL STORIES.
To support and promote Kansas history through the Kansas Historical Society.

On the cover: The top 25 Notable Kansans were selected by Governor Sam Brownback’s blue ribbon panel on Kansas history and announced at five events around the state in Summer 2011. These Kansans were selected for making significant contributions to the state, the nation, and the world. Nancy Landon Kassebaum and Bob Dole were among those honored. This issue highlights more of these Notable Kansans.
From the President and Executive Director

O ur work begins with you, our loyal members and donors. Your generosity saves rare Civil War battle flags, conserves valuable objects, purchases historic artifacts, and creates classroom materials on Kansas history for students, plus so much more. We hope you read with pride the accomplishments of the Kansas Historical Foundation and its impact on the Kansas Historical Society, a state agency, in fiscal year 2011.

The commemoration of the birth of Kansas statehood began in January with a special exhibit, 150 Things I Love About Kansas, which continues to the end of the calendar year 2011. Our sincere thanks to Capitol Federal Foundation, the Kansas Humanities Council, Midwest Minerals of Pittsburg honoring board chairman George Nettels, Jr., and Kay and John Callison for helping the Kansas Historical Society create this exciting exhibit for people of all ages to enjoy.

We are also grateful to the Dane G. Hansen Foundation for making the Kansas 150 exhibit available to students from northwest Kansas. The foundation’s bus subsidy gift will impact nearly 1,500 students, students who otherwise might not have visited the Kansas Museum of History during this important year.

Your donation helped support the Kansas Historical Society reach priorities of educating, collecting, and preserving Kansas history. Your generosity is making a difference in the lives of students and citizens.

It has been an honor for us to serve you during this sesquicentennial year as the president and executive director of the Kansas Historical Foundation. On behalf of the board of directors and everyone at the Kansas Historical Society, we thank you for your support.

Embracing the Future—New Strategic Plan Developed

The Kansas State Historical Society, Inc., (KSHS, Inc.) Board of Director’s executive committee made history this year by adopting a new “doing business as” name. After much discussion and planning, KSHS, Inc., will now be known as the “Kansas Historical Foundation.” The legal name remains the same.

The new name will help to clearly delineate state functions—education, collection, and preservation—from nonprofit functions—fund raising and fund management, membership, and retail. In July 2011 all state agency logos were updated and KSHS, Inc., could no longer share a logo with the Kansas Historical Society. The two names were too similar for the public distinguish, so the new name was created to clearly brand our mission—that of supporting the work of the Kansas Historical Society.

To make this change, the executive committee needed to complete a new strategic plan. The first steps were to hold three regional board meetings across the state in July 2010. The meetings gathered input, which the executive committee considered in its planning. The August 2010 executive committee meeting included a planning session with an outside facilitator, with sustainability as a key discussion point. The goals and mission were approved at the December 2010 executive committee meeting.

These goals were integrated into a joint strategic plan with the state agency at the June 3, 2011, meeting. The Kansas Historical Foundation will focus more resources on development and fewer resources on retail in order to build upon the success of the Kansas Historical Society for now and the next 150 years.

Mission: To support and promote Kansas history through the Kansas Historical Society.

Notable Kansan | Walter Chrysler – (1875-1940)

He worked for Buick before purchasing his own car company in 1925. Chrysler Corporation became the second largest car company in the nation.

Chrysler used this saw set early in his career as a machinist and railroad mechanic.
Hansen Foundation Introduces Students to History

The Dane G. Hansen Foundation of Logan generously provided subsidies to schools from northwest Kansas in observance of the Kansas sesquicentennial in 2011. These funds covered the cost to visit the Kansas Museum of History's special exhibit, 150 Things I Love About Kansas.

Washington Elementary and Junior High of Ellis were the first schools to participate in the grant. The schools brought 53 seventh and eighth grade students in May. For some students, this was their first trip east of Salina.

“Having taught Kansas history in my past, I was really impressed with the number of connections between the museum displays and our Kansas history state standards and textbook information,” wrote Tiffany VanDerVeen of Phillipsburg Middle School. “I overheard many student remarks demonstrating these connections as we toured, which is powerful.”

Several more schools will take advantage of the field trip subsidies in fall 2011.

Students from Washington Elementary and Junior High of Ellis were the first to take advantage of the Hansen Foundation grants.
Charles Clark's great-great grandfather served as a regimental blacksmith from Illinois during the Civil War. Afterward he moved his family to Montgomery County, Kansas. His son, David, followed his father and became a blacksmith, opening a shop in Linn County near Mound City. These early connections to Kansas inspired a deep love of his state's history. Clark developed an interest in the territorial time period and created a website on the bogus legislature, kansasboguslegislature.org.

Growing up near Mine Creek Battlefield State Historic Site, Clark had a special appreciation for the site of the Civil War battle. He and his wife, Virginia, want to share their passion for the site's history with others. They recently donated $50,000 for exterior exhibits at the site near Pleasanton.

The Mine Creek visitor center features exhibits of the October 25, 1864, battle and is open seasonally. Visitors can also walk the 3.5 mile nature trail. The Clarks' gift will help extend opportunities for visitors who travel to the site when it is closed.

"We know there will be a peak of interest during the Civil War sesquicentennial," Clark said. "We hope by making this contribution that we can encourage others to help preserve history."

"We are grateful for the Clark's generosity," said Jennie Chinn, Kansas Historical Society executive director. "Their gift will help us reach even more people through this enhanced experience."

Charles Clark serves on the Kansas Historical Foundation's executive committee and the board of Freedom's Frontier. The Mine Creek Battlefield exterior exhibits are expected to be completed by summer 2012.

Notable Kansan | John Brown – (1800-1859)

He came to Osawatomie in 1855 and used violence in his efforts to end slavery, which led to the territory being called "Bleeding Kansas."

John Brown purchased this pike for the raid in Harpers Ferry, Virginia, in 1859.
Dru Mort Sampson wanted to encourage the Kansas Historical Foundation presidents to leave a legacy. As outgoing president at the annual meeting in November 2010, she and her husband, Bill, pledged to endow a fund that would cover the cost of operating expenses for the not-for-profit organization. Their initial gift of $5,000 created the Presidents Fund. Annual earnings from the fund will help to provide sustainability for the organization. Several past presidents joined the Sampsons in the effort and several more have pledged support.

Nearly 600 life members were solicited to participate during the sesquicentennial year. In March the fund reached the minimum endowment level of $10,000 and is now permanently restricted for various Foundation expenses. Outstanding pledges will bring the fund to $17,000.

“The presidents of the organization get involved in the day to day business and understand the need for basic operating funds,” Sampson said. “Sustainability is a constant challenge and with the success of this fund, we are better able to assist the state agency with its development and programs.”

Known as the “Sage of Emporia,” White received two Pulitzer Prizes, and a book award is named for him. He served as president of the Kansas Historical Society in 1939.

White’s press pass is from the 1916 Democratic National Convention.
Membership News

For more than 50 years, 30 loyal individuals and organizations have supported the Kansas Historical Society. We greatly appreciate the dedication of these people and that of all our members who help preserve Kansas history.

At the end of fiscal year 2011, the total membership was 2,735, down 1.7 percent from the prior year. Our membership is loyal and stable but there have been decreases in recent years. Several factors may be the cause of these decreases: fewer people in the baby-boom generation tend to join organizations, people who move out of state may have lost interest, difficult economic conditions resulted in cancellations, and some of our members have recently passed away. We lost 26 life members this past year. Two families suggested donations to our foundation in memory of their loved ones and more than $5,000 in memorial donations were received from individuals.

KSHS, Inc., Annual Meeting

The following awards were presented at the 135th annual meeting November 5, 2010, in Topeka.

Edgar Langsdorf Award of Excellence – William E. Foley
“Murder on the Santa Fe Trail: The United States v See See Sah Mah and Escotah”

Alfred M. Landon Historical Research Award – Mary Peterson Zundo
“The View From Above: Picturing the Kansas Prairie Empire, 1854-1880”

KSHS, Inc., Annual Spring Meeting

The 34th annual spring members meeting was held in conjunction with the preservation community. Preservation Works: 2011 Kansas Preservation Conference, June 1-3, 2011, in Topeka, drew 175 people. The conference featured Kansans talking about Kansas, vernacular architecture, leading by example, rehabilitation techniques, face-to-face discussions, and sessions for teachers. National Geographic photographer Jim Richardson was the featured presenter. Limited private scholarship funds were offered to college students; teachers; Certified Local Government commissioners; and KSHS, Inc., members who wanted to attend. A number of KSHS, Inc., members and board members took part in the joint conference.

Give the gift of membership.

A membership is a great way for an out-of-state friend or relative to stay connected to Kansas.
Museum Store News

The Museum Store offered a number of Kansas 150-related products this past fiscal year. These popular items were available at the Museum Store in Topeka, the Capitol Store, and stores at several state-owned historic sites. The goal of the Museum Store is to extend the learning experience by featuring unique products inspired by the Historical Society collections. Several new items were introduced this past fiscal year and this direction seems to be successful. Total sales were more than $284,000 for the year. A number of new products are currently in development.

The Kansas Historical Foundation also published a special sesquicentennial issue of its scholarly journal, Kansas History: A Journal of the Central Plains.

Internship Draws History Students

The John Ripley Internship, named for a Topeka businessman who was passionate about history, funds full-time summer positions at the Kansas Historical Society. The internship is available to students from a Shawnee County high school or those attending college in Shawnee County. Two students were selected for the Ripley internship in fiscal year 2011. Christopher Clanahan worked in the Cultural Resources Division.

Kristina Gaylord, a history student at Washburn University, split her time between the museum division and promotion department. She previously volunteered in museum and cultural resources divisions. For her internship with the museum, Gaylord helped catalogue and complete paperwork on new and incoming accessions. For the promotion department, Gaylord researched and wrote articles for the Historical Society’s online encyclopedia, Kansapedia.

Gaylord plans to pursue a career in museums and found the internship invaluable in learning more about Kansas history. She especially appreciated the opportunity to hone her research and writing skills. “That was a big help since I’m now working on my senior thesis, which involves doing just that!” Gaylord said. “I enjoyed discovering the state’s fun history that gets overlooked. It’s seemingly unrelated things that usually turned up the best information.”

Private Funds Make Rare Acquisitions Possible

Esther Mary Clark Hill was a Kansas poet and biographer. After studying journalism at the University of Kansas, she went on to be a writer for the Lawrence Journal-World. In 1907 it published one of her early poems, “Call of Kansas”; the Kansas City Star ran many of Hill’s other works. She published three volumes of poetry during her life and later wrote articles for the Historical Society’s Kansas Historical Quarterly.

The Historical Society was able to acquire a collection of Hill’s work that includes poetry, writings, correspondence, publications, and photographs of her and her family. This was one of several acquisitions made possible in fiscal year 2011 by the Ralph and Majorie Crump Endowment.
The unrealized market gain for fiscal year 2011 was 21.15 percent, an exceptional year that brought total assets to more than $4 million dollars by the end of the fiscal year.

The Foundation’s annual impact on Kansas Historical Society programs has been more than $500,000 since 2008.
Support for Kansas History

With your help the Foundation raised nearly $500,000 in gifts and grants in fiscal year 2011 and provided $542,025 to the Kansas Historical Society for critical programming. Private and grant funds from people like you were spent on the following:

More than $330,000 in private dollar support:
• $91,000 Fort Hays reinterpretation
• $57,000 150 Things I Love About Kansas exhibit, fourth grade workbook
• $52,000 William Allen White House
• $43,000 marketing for Shawnee Indian Mission
• $19,000 improvements at state-owned historic sites
• $67,000 conservation, acquisitions, bus subsidies, internships, awards, and smaller projects

More than $210,000 of grant funding:
• $122,454 newspaper digitization for Library of Congress website
• $27,492 digitizing Lewis and Clark papers on Kansas Memory
• $20,607 Kansas Preservation newsletter
• $5,187 Read Kansas! cards production

You can make a difference!

For the future—endow a fund.
• Our greatest needs include exhibits, historic sites, and programming

For Kansas students—invest in K-12 history education
• Curriculum development

For Kansas citizens—support a major cultural institution
• The entrance to the museum galleries is outdated. We need a major partner to help us create a “Kansas history” experience that inspires children.

Your entire donation is used for the area of support of your gift. Please contact Vicky Henley 785-272-8681, ext. 201, for more information about making a difference in the lives of Kansas citizens and students.

James Maag serves as treasurer and chairs the finance committee. The Kansas Historical Foundation (KSHS, Inc.) is an IRS approved 501(c)(3) organization.

An independent CPA firm conducted the audit in September and a draft of its findings was submitted to the audit committee. Deborah Barker serves as secretary and chairs the audit committee. The auditor’s report was then reviewed and approved by the audit committee and forwarded to the executive committee for its review and final approval.
